"This summer was a journey, a discovery, an adventure all rolled into one. I learned more about horses, about people, about myself in three months than I expected. After having spent seven years at Meadowbrook, it's interesting for me to think that sometimes, the places you know best can teach you the most if only you take the time to learn, but that is exactly what Meadowbrook, its staff, its horses, and volunteers gave me this summer, and I am so grateful to have shared that learning experience with so many who understood what it was like

I had never really gotten along with Beli. All summer, she had trotted around the arena with her back hollow, refusing to stretch. With 2 weeks to go before my fight back to Chicago, Beli gave me something that meant more than anything else I had that summer. She stretched, again and again. I will never forget that magical moment when she broke that glass ceiling, that moment that came when I had least expected it and made me realize that all it ever had been was one big puzzle. It had nothing to do with how good I was, or how bad she might have been, or how anything either of us ever was. All Beli had needed from me was some time, some patience, some perseverance, and a little faith that it would all come together somehow, somewhere."

"When I arrived at the stable the first time, I had no idea what to expect. I was quite nervous but also happy to meet the people and horses in Meadowbrook. After working some days with the people and horses, I realized very quickly what a great environment I work in. I have rarely met people who care so much for the good of horses like this. There each horse was treated immediately if it was sick and got the special needed treatment. Even the saddles and bridles are treated with utmost care.

It was a very great honor for me, riding the young stars in Meadowbrook. I enjoyed the confidence of all, and was always grateful for tips. It is hard to find such a stable like this (in the world!) Which operated with so much love and knowledge. Here kids and adults can learn how real riding and working with horses are like and learn to respect them. I would like to say thanks to the Meadowbrook Family for this unique experience. I was able to learn a lot from you. I will never forget U! Thank you!
