

In March 2004, one of the TV stations in Shanghai featured Edward Wong, founder of Meadowbrook on the "In People" program.

Ed talked about his passion for horses which ultimately inspired his recent venture, Meadowbrook and how all this has changed his perspective of life.

It was "love at first sight" when Ed saw horses at the age of eight, and at age eleven he started learning how to ride.

At age thirty-nine, he decided it was time to live the life he always wanted, that is to ride horses freely in a countryside setting.

A search for horses brought him to Xin Jing, a journey which brought him closer to the animals he loved.

Meadowbrook is Ed's dream and horses are his life. He said you cannot hide your feeling from the horses, they will detect it, so just be yourself and be sincere and treat them as your friends.
